Subject: National Library Workers Day

Dear LVCCLD Team,
Recognizing the adaptation that you've experienced in our new normal in order to connect our community with resources during this critical time, I want to say Thank You, today on National Library Workers Day for tirelessly giving it your all.

National Library Workers Day is observed on the Tuesday of National Library Week, which is celebrated this week.

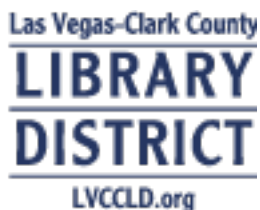

Being a believer in the transformative power of libraries, National Library Week gives everyone an opportunity to recognize the people who make all of this possible, our dedicated Library District employees.

In a world that has been beset by a pandemic and all that has accompanied it, it's been you that has been a beacon of optimism and resilience, in service to the LVCCLD.

So, today let's recognize the importance of your contributions, the engine keeping our libraries running.

Have a great day and great week.

Kelvin
